CONFISCATED BY THE LAW.

HIS was the experience of the Drumlummon lode controversy, which ranks as the great apex case of the Montana courts. The facts in that case have been compiled by Charles, W. Goodale. one of the best known mining engineers of Butte, whereon to predicate an argument for a revision of the federal mining laws, to the end that all extra lateral rights be abolished and that the British system of vertical lines become the law of the United States. How ever, that is not a matter of local importance at this stage of proecedings, for Tonopah is going through the agony of its first apex controversy with slight showing for an amicable termination. A compromise through arbitration is not outside the realms of possibility and the extension of the time for returning an answer to the suit of the Jim Butler furnishes a respite from the tension that has prevailed for the last thirty days. This breathing spell may bring the disputants closer togethers since both sides have had opportunity to fully test and understand the merits of their allegations. The Bonanza has already dwelt on the value of finding some middle ground for approaching a solution and in the course of the discussion has referred to the Drumlummon as an example of what litigation costs, but it is believed a closer study of the application of the law in the Montana case will have some weight with both sides. As Sacramento 3, a prelude to his monograph on the apex law Mr. Charles W. Good stagte and Hannah. ale epitomizes the Drumlummon case in the following pithy paragraph:

The litigation between the St. Louis Mining and Milling company, and the Montana Mining company, Limited, over portions of the Drumlummon lode covered a period of more than twenty years, and resulted in a judgment for damages in favor of the St Louis company of such an amount that the Montana Mining company declined to pay the judgment and therefore lost the entire property.

The last trial resulted in the court instructing the jury that if Carrying United States mail and they found in favor of the plaintiff they should include in their express makes daily trips from Tono verdict interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum on the value pah to Manhattan and Round Moun of the ore extracted in 1893. As nearly sixteen years had elapsed, cain. Cars leave Tonopah daily on the interest amounted to considerably more than the value of the at 2:30 p. m. ore. Upon a writ of error the case was reviewed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, where it was affirmed and a writ of certiorari was denied by the Supreme Court of the United States on March 6, 1911. The Montana Mining company decided to offer no further resistance and in due course the property was sold by the sheriff to the plaintiff.

The litigation in its various phases required in the aggregateabout five months in the four trials on questions of fact and that it reached the State Supreme Court once, the Circuit Court of Appeals five times and the Supreme Court of the United States four times. Furthermore, much time was occupied by the courts in many preliminary hearings.

PREVENTING COMPETITION.

G ILBERT ROSS, secretary of the Nevada Panama Pacific directors, is doing his level best to curry favor with builders and contractors of his home town by limiting advertising for construction work to the papers of that city. This narrow pinheaded policy is strictly in accord with the cramped conceit of the lieutenant governor, who cannot see beyond his nose in a business proposition. In contrast with the course of the exposition secretary it may be said that the Nevada School of Industry is advertising in outside papers for bids for the construction of a home at Elko. Perhaps Ross thinks he is currying favor with some instead of adopting a broad gauge policy of throwing bids open to all taxpayers of the state who have helped pay the meal ticket of the lieutenant governor for in all o' Big Ban's circuit towns they hall him clowns, the grand exalted nut. It's worth the price to go an' see that crazy son o' G rmany put on his classic strut. He gets out there at first or third an' puffs his chest out like a bird, then lifts his knees chinhigh; he prances roun' that coachin' place an' lets weird sounds loose from his face between a laugh an' cry. He kids the players, kids the crowd-he kids the umpire right out loud an' gets away with it. He's acrobatic, full o' pey-one minute does a tango step, the next one throws a fit. Griff carries him as roustabout, but don't get in wrong, bo, an' doubt that Schaef can play the game. He's one great bug, I'll grant you that, but when he has to field or but he's right there jus' the same.
